++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wintry showers becoming confined to north and east.

Today:
A cold day with brisk northerly winds. A band of showers moves south early morning, then drier with sunny spells in the west, but a few showers continuing in the east and far north, often wintry to low levels.

Tonight:
A band of rain and hill snow moves south this evening. Then a dry spell for most before heavy frequent wintry showers over the Northern Isles spread to Northeast mainland.

Thursday:
A few wintry showers in the east at first giving a risk of icy stretches. Otherwise a cold sunny morning. Cloudier afternoon. Rain and snow spreads east in the evening.

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
Dry for most of Friday, showers far north, rain later southwest. Cold and unsettled on Saturday with showers or longer spells of rain. Turning drier through Sunday, but still cold.
